A high school science project that a physics teacher offered to buy and a fear that I might never get a job were the two factors that motivated me to start PASCO scientific and produce equipment for teaching physics. Starting a business has a lot of twists, turns, double backs, and dead ends along the way, but I believe my undergraduate physics degree was still the best preparation for this career.